Drive to Visoko, an early center of the Bosnian medieval state, and the site where the first Bosnian king Tvrtko I was crowned. Near the town of Visoko are located the hills known as The Bosnian pyramids. The Bosnian pyramids are a pseudo-archaeological claim promoted by author Semir Osmanagic, that a cluster of natural hills in central Bosnia and Herzegovina are the largest human-made ancient pyramids on Earth. They came to international attention in 2005, following a news-media campaign by Osmanagic and his supporters. Geologists, archeologists and other scientists have however concluded, after analysis of the site, its known history, and the excavations, that the hills are natural formations known as flatirons and that there are no signs of human construction involved.
