Cauayan is a city in Isabela situated in the center of this big and naturally rich province. The town got its name from the word "Cauayan" meaning bamboo in the dialect of Gaddang, the early settlers of this place. Cauayan was an original town of the Province of Cagayan. It was transferred to Nueva Vizcaya when it became a province in 1839. Upon the creation of Isabela as a province by a Royal Decree issued on May 1, 1856, it was reverted as a town of the province. After breakfast, depart hotel for Hapao and Batad Rice Terraces tour Onboard a local non-airconditioned jeepney visit the picturesque town of Hapao where you will view the Banaue rice terraces, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The terraces are just a few of extensive stoned-walled terraces-built centuries ago. It is believed that it is in this place where the origin of the terraces culture of the Ifugao started. Leave Hapao Rice Terraces and proceed to Batad Rice Terraces The amphitheater-like rice terraces of Batad are without a doubt one of the most breathtaking views I have witnessed. The 2,000-year-old rice terraces are also some of the most remote in the world, located in a tiny village only accessible on foot. When people say 'getting there is half the adventure', well they were probably talking about the journey to Batad. Traveling to this UNESCO World Heritage site is not for the faint hearted, so it's best you know a few things before planning your trip. Drive back to Banaue Overnight accommodation Breakfast included.

Fe, Nueva Vizcaya, passing by Bagabag, where picturesque mountains and rivers start to ascend to the Ifugao land. Arrive in Manila late in the afternoon or early evening.
